

random facts girl. @soychicka

19 Apr 19 · 9 tweets · soychicka/status/1119350737643896834

<th>

I think @DonnyDeutsch has been spot on with how to frame the importance of the Mueller report:

it's about there being two Americas - one for the rich and privileged, where you skip to the front of the line, & the other for the rest of us, where you spend your life in line.

Trump + his 'kind' gets away with anything and everything, while the rest of us are stuck swinging blindly against monolithic insurance companies to get the health coverage we need and paid for, getting stuck fighting against banks' overdraft fees when their error temporarily debits $12,377 from our account (sucking up, on average, at LEAST 3 phone calls to eventually resolve)...

We're too mired in fighting for what's rightfully ours to have a real chance to get ahead, let alone have the time and energy left over to fight to defend the democracy we deserve.

And imagine how much harder it will be to keep what's ours when the current administration realizes the autocratic, authoritarian model favored (by someone the Russian govt helped to install in the Oval Office) while we're focusing on health care as a primary concern.

Because the reason we don't have good, affordable health care is the same reason we've lost upward mobility, and why immigration is wielded as a weapon to fracture the fabric of the nation...

It's income (and thusly power) inequality.

It's a positive feedback loop, consolidating wealth in the hands of the super-rich at the expense of our own financial well-being, our physical well-being, our mental and societal health.

And just like a parasite that eventually kills its host, it's evolutionarily unsustainable.

Now, perhaps I can help @DonnyDeutsch to understand why Barr is ending his career by being Trump's bitch:

There's a chance he's Epstein's bitch too, and from your comments about 'evil' today, I'm guessing you know all about that.

The image shows a screenshot of a tweet and a Wikipedia snippet. The tweet is from a user named 'random facts girl.' (@soychicka) and contains the following text: 'Let's shine a little sunlight on this: when now-AG Bill Barr's father, Donald Barr, was headmaster at the Dalton school in NYC, he hired a two-time college dropout to teach physics and calculus to high school students. That teacher's name was Jeffrey Epstein.' The tweet has 3,518 likes and was posted on April 1, 2019. Below the tweet, it says '3,284 people are talking about this'. The Wikipedia snippet is for 'Donald Barr' and includes the following information: Born August 8, 1921, Manhattan, New York; Died February 5, 2004 (aged 82), Langhorne, Pennsylvania; Children 4, including William P. Barr. Below the snippet is a link to the Wikipedia page for Jeffrey Epstein.

Donald Barr

Born August 8, 1921
Manhattan, New York

Died February 5, 2004 (aged 82)
Langhorne, Pennsylvania

Children 4, including William P. Barr

Jeffrey Epstein - Wikipedia

Jeffrey Edward Epstein (born January 20, 1953) is an American financier, science and research ... Epstein taught calculus and physics at the Dalton School in Manhattan from 1973 to 1975. Among his students was a son of Alan C. Greenberg.

Education: Cooper Union, New York University Born: Jeffrey Edward Epstein, January 20, 1953 ... Occupation: Financier, Owner, Jeffrey Epstein VI ...

Brook Wether Lenoir School, Jeffrey Epstein VI Foundation, Ghislaine Maxwell

random facts girl.
@soychicka

Let's shine a little sunlight on this: when now-AG Bill Barr's father, Donald Barr, was headmaster at the Dalton school in NYC, he hired a two-time college dropout to teach physics and calculus to high school students.

That teacher's name was Jeffrey Epstein.

♥ 3,518 4:14 PM - Apr 1, 2019

🗨 3,284 people are talking about this

Or, you know, the whole SMARTech breach thing might play a role... at minimum, it would be worth looking into if Barr was in league with Meese and Regnery, so... yeah.

The image shows a screenshot of a tweet. The text of the tweet is: 'consulting for the RNC in 2000. "I can tell you from my tenure there that the Smartech bill includes a lot of things that aren't GOP.com," said former RNC eCampaign Director Michael Turk. "If you go back and look at that bill over time, I suspect it has always been high, regardless of who was Chair and regardless of whether they were rolling out a new GOP.com." The range of services provided by Smartech extends far beyond pricey bandwidth support for the party's new website. According to party officials, Smartech facilitates internet at the national headquarters, hosts 31 state parties' websites on the RNC's platform, and provides broadcast email capabilities to the RNC and over 40 state parties.' Below the tweet, there is a section titled 'kompromatilicious' with the text: 'Why did Republicans fall in line with the Trump? Not just to push through an agenda: Russian agents hacked the GOP's data center in 2015 - emails, voter files, and all their dirty secrets about $ + ...' and a URL: 'https://twitter.com/i/moments/887752557761900544'.

consulting for the RNC in 2000.

"I can tell you from my tenure there that the Smartech bill includes a lot of things that aren't GOP.com," said former RNC eCampaign Director Michael Turk. "If you go back and look at that bill over time, I suspect it has always been high, regardless of who was Chair and regardless of whether they were rolling out a new GOP.com."

The range of services provided by Smartech extends far beyond pricey bandwidth support for the party's new website. According to party officials, Smartech facilitates internet at the national headquarters, hosts 31 state parties' websites on the RNC's platform, and provides broadcast email capabilities to the RNC and over 40 state parties.

kompromatilicious

Why did Republicans fall in line with the Trump? Not just to push through an agenda: Russian agents hacked the GOP's data center in 2015 - emails, voter files, and all their dirty secrets about $ + ...

<https://twitter.com/i/moments/887752557761900544>

...